

I am not intereted in getting any calls from my bank or for that matter any financial institution. My fear is that my phone will start ringing at the same rate I get sollicitaions for credit cards and other loans in the my regualar mail. I own a marketing company and know for a fact that banks can market MANY other ways that can be just as effective if not more so if done right. Telemarketers abused their privliages and had plenty of time to govern themselves and failed to so. Now they are paying the price and seem to want to just keep crying about it. Too bad!
